

Fass Pass to Love's Matchability Self-Test

DEAL-BREAKERS VS. PREFERENCES: THE ETERNAL QUESTION!

Below are the Preferences/Deal-Breakers that Matchmaker Jessica Fass advises singles to stay open-minded on if you want to be realistic in your search for lasting love and find your Bashert as "Fass as you can!"

How should you decide when to give a Potential Match a chance and when to pass on a dating opportunity? You can learn how to recognize when a Match is on target for you by understanding and clarifying what is most important to you first, by using this self-test below. Jessica also utilizes this same test as a screening tool to help her clients stay focused on finding their match. Being overly selective or "picky" can really complicate your search. Your goal is to remain open-minded on 4 out of these 8 Categories - then you are well on your way to finding your Match!

Age Range

Youngest to oldest age range that you are open to dating. (Don't be hesitant to go a bit younger or older - age is just a number, after all!)

Physical Appearance Preferences

Does your Match need to be physically active / a certain height / have a certain hair color, etc.? The more open you can stay on this one, the better!

Location

Are you open to relocation? Your Bashert might not be in your own backyard, especially if you have many other preferences as well.

Cultural/Ethnic Background

Ashkenazi / Sephardic / Persian and more, do they all work for you?

Political Views

Are you into politics? How important are a Match's political views to you?

Marital Status

Can your Match be divorced / widowed? Can your Match have children from a previous relationship?

Religious Observance Level

Do you keep Kosher and / or observe Shabbat and the High Holidays? Which Jewish traditions and customs are most important to you?

Children

Do you want to have children? Are you dreaming of a small or big family?

Remember, we can't get everything on our "List" but we CAN make realistic, healthy compromises to find love with a partner who we find attractive mentally, emotionally, physically, and spiritually.
